The introduction is not just important because of the "first impressions" idea that it will tilt the referee for or against you (though it probably will). It is also vital to making sure you know yourself what you are doing in the paper and why. If you can't write a good introduction, then you may be writing the wrong paper.

A parent company presents its investments in equity shares in its asset side of the Balance Sheet under Investments. The same is visible on the Equity side of the Balance Sheet of the subsidiary under Share Capital. If we acquired the investment at par, the two amounts are equal, and for the consolidation, we eliminate these in the Balance Sheet.
